

Ethical Code

- We research our practice and that of others for the purpose of learning about it and not to criticize or judge it.
- We deal with the practice and not with the personality of the people observed
- We assume that the people we observed or talk about are well intentioned and smart. If we did not immediately understand the logic of their actions, we must try harder.
- We assume that the events we are observing or talking about are part of a broader context that is currently not fully available to us.
- All that is said remains in the learning session.
